

Giorgia Albetino

She graduated in Law from the Federico II University of Naples and began her professional career at the Bonelli Erede law firm. After a short period at the European Commission, from 2004 to 2008 she collaborated with Sky Italia, dealing with regulatory affairs and then moving to New York, where she worked at News Corporation. Since 2010 she has been collaborating with Google, where she holds the role of director of public affairs for Italy, France, Greece and Malta and director of external relations.